WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.-While the Japanese legation has received no official confirmation of the dispatches indicating the mission of Dietering on behalf of China to Japan has been a failure the disposition there is to regard the information as authentic. The time, they say, has passed when the differences existing between the two nations can be settled by the customs authorities and they declare if China really desired to bring about peace through negotiations it must be done through a regularly accorded envoy from the emperor of China to the emperor of Japan. The Japanese authorities here do not regard with favor the reports of the interference of the European powers. Regarding the St. Petersburg dispatch quoting the Novoe Vremya, they say while they recognize the Novoe Vremya may speak from authority on account of its relations with the Russian crown, its assumption that Japan has refused peace proposals is without foundation. There is no disposition to scout the proposition of the United States to mediate. On the contrary it is suggested it would be entirely satisfactory to have the preliminaries of any peace negotiations conducted by the American ministers of Japan and China, because they are informed as to the situation, and it is believed that they would be unbiased and impartial. With the negotions once under way they insist, however, details must be left to be arranged by direct conference between the personal representative of the Chinese ruler and the Japanese foreign minister.

WORK NOT CREEDS IS THE STANDARD

PULL ALTOGETHER FOR THE LORD'S CAUSE.

Such Was Rev. Sabin Halsey's Advice to All Christians In His Excellent Sermon on "Grounds For Thanks, the Court Street Church Yesterday.

for observing Thanksgiving day.

"I am sure no fair minded man will license or lawlessness" he insisted. The finest person on earth is conscious that he is under the limitations of righteous law. Only he who lives on a very low plain, under the dominion of a nature touched by the corruption of sin, who from choice permits fleshly appetites and passions to sit on the scone of his soul instead of enlightened reason supported bp a sanctified conscience, clamors for license. The true man recognizes his kingly origin and destiny, ready at any moment to die in his tracks defending his rights, touched in his heart by the divine spirit of inspiration which pushes him out into a world of irrepressible conflict to fight the battle that he may finally win and wear the crown cries: "I am free, there is no gallying yoke of bondage on my neck, no fetters on my feet, no chains on my wrists, yet I recognize the limitations of law and a supreme power to which I owe obedience at any cost.

"True sometimes we are confronted ligious liberty after all our boasting is nothing more than a rotten plank in the platform of a creed. A practical illustration of the principle stated wrings from human lips the unbrothberesy cry of inspires a spirit of persecution cruel as death and heartless as the grave. But such facts constitute the exception, not the law. I think they may be easily accounted for in two ways. First, on the ground of religious fanatism. In some degree it is found nestling in every school of thought, and retards the progress of truth and righteousness. The fag ends of intolerance and bigotry born of ignorance cling to some men even after monversion, and bear fruit which is bitter to the taste. This is not so strange when we remember that human perfection in a world that has felt the blighting touch of evil is simply the dream of a possibility yet to be realized. In nature tares grow in the same field with the wheat, thistles grow by the side of the beautiful wild rose, noxious weeds spring up by the side of pansies, a stagnant pool is found in the center of a fruitful plain; but then nature is not all tares and thistles, stagnant ponds and moxious weeds. So in the kingdom above nature, in the world of thought and soul life we may find, if that is the object of our search, gnarled and dwarfed specimens of the human family, the promising buds of generosity and nobility first blasted and thus developed finally into prickly thorns.

Prejudice Their Religion.

Second. Prejudice without reasonable foundation accounts in part for the exceptions noted. This I am constrained to believe is the sum total of the religion of some people, and to give it a sort of a circulation in the world they write all over it in large letters two words, conviction and conscience. They sent heresy from afar and bitterly denounce as error everything which does not conform in letter to their peculiar religious standards. Prejudice grows more radidly and luxuriantly in the soil of the heart than true religion and instead of plucking it up root and branch, we clip the branshes a little at the top and leave the roots. To be a little more definite I mean by religious liberty as furnishing a ground for thanksgiving. First, every man's right under the American flag to do his own thinking on every question of morality and religion, and his right to give public expression to his thoughts in his own way at any time or place so long as he does not infringe on the rights and privileges of his brother, nor seriously disturb the quiet and peace of society. This right is based on a higher law any found written in the statute books of a nation. Trample it in the dust, deny the right of this king to sit on his throne with auwhat is he then more than an animal? of worship adopted very peculiar, yet thority to reign in righteousness and He who even in the name of religion relinquishes this right conferred by the infinite God in creation, and permits another to do his thinking on the be taught or land be trod, man's congreat problems agitating the world is an abject slave bound hand and foot for time and eternity. I believe in the thoughts of other people formulated into creeds and systems of theology, just as I believe in crutches for the lame, just as I believe in the body, which is the temporary home of the soul, but I believe a thousand times more in the soul itself, in that mysterious wonderful thing the wisest philosopher has never been able to define, called for convenience mind, and in its divine right to pick human giving" at the Union Meeting at creeds and systems of theology, however ancient or recent, to pieces; then gather up the fragments of trut's and That praise is an essential element scatter error to the winds of heaven of religion and that ingratitude was a as food for the birds. COST OF A KISS.

He Had to Start Over Again for Merely Asking One.

The police court reports in the London papers sometimes quote the price of a kiss, which usually ranges from half a crown to half a sovereign, according to the temperament of the magistrate. How ridiculously cheap this is will be seen from the following account of the cost of merely asking for a kiss, which has been sent to me from India:

Probably you will hardly credit the story, but it is quite true, and though the names are withheld by the Allahabad paper which gives the facts, the parties are well known. An officer of the Madras medical service was holding one of the most desirable civil surgeoncies in the province, and there he received a visit from a civilian and his wife. While driving with the lady in a dogcart the doctor asked her for a kiss. It was very wrong, especially as there was a native servant sitting behind the couple, and he met with the stern repulse his impudence and imprudence invited. This exemplary woman afterward wrote to the doctor that she had told her husband of his conduct.

The doctor then wrote an abject apology, which the husband submitted to the Madras government. Without being allowed to say a word on his own behalf, the doctor was forthwith advised to resign the service to avoid dismissal. Since then the Madras government has been induced to modify its decision. The offender is graciously permitted to serve the further nine months necessary to qualify him for the lowest scale of pension, but he has been transferred from his civil surgeoncy back to military service and packed off to a remote station in Upper Burmah.

A RELIC OF SLAVERY.

The Bond Required Before Negroes Could Travel on Railroads.

It may not be generally known to those who came on the stage of existence subsequent to the war that slaves were transported on the railroads subject to such conditions as appear in the following document, which was preserved by Robert Morris of Kentucky. As a relic of antebellum days it will be interesting alike to old and young:

"Whereas, The president and directors of the Louisville and Nashville railroad on the 1st day of August, 1860, passed the following resolution: 'The transportation of persons of color over the road and the liability incurred being under consideration; resolved that no person of color be taken in the cars for passage over any part of the road or its branches without the execution of an obligation, signed by a responsible party or parties, to indemnify and save the company harmless, and the superintendent print forms, to be kept at the different depots, and give full instructions to the agents and full instructions to the agents and That was the decision in the Prendergast case conductors and have this resolution of the assassination of Mayor Harrison of Chifully carried into effect.' Now this instrument witnesseth that the undersigned obligate themselves to pay the Louisville and Nashville railroad company all costs and damages which said company shall incur for taking at our instance the following slave (colored person) over their road, to-wit: A negro girl named Milly, about fourteen years old, the property of Craig Middleton, of Henry county, Kentucky. As witness our hands this 24th day of December, 1860. "Ossian Drane, Principal.

Love, he said was needed more than art and science. The dark ages of the past when tortures were abandoned for prayers were now passing away and in the light of truth the people were seeing what a hidious nonster cruelty was. The signs of the times, as he saw them, indicated a tendency toward a closer union of all in peace and unity. Diversity of tastes in forms of worship did not necessarily imply separation and bitter antagonism. The love of Christ vas fatal to strife. The church of God was keeping pace with the times. This meant much to people who had consecrated themselves to the work of solving the perplexing problem of life and destiny.

The diffusion of knowledge would better things. History taught that one of the most dangerous classes on earth was .composed of those who profess to be pious and yet turn their eyes away from the light of truth, preferring to walk in the darkness of ignorance, This piety, he thought might be better than no piety but it did not represent the broad foundation upon which the kingdom of God was founded. and depended for success. ### JOHNSTOWN CIDER CAUSES A RUMPUS

ELECTION DAY ROW IS BEFORE JUDGE PHELPS.

The Question Is Concerning Assault and Battery and Incidentally What Effect Apple Juice Has-Bad John of the Town.

THE "Johnstown cider row" was rehearsed before Judge Phelps today. The question is one of assault and battery, although incidentally the question of how drunk a man could Charles D'Almaine, violinist: Grant get on cider is involved. E. Brotherton is the defendant. Mr. Brotherton is the proprietor of the hotel in Johntown and the complaining witness is Stephen Fanning. It was on election day that a disturbance was created in the hotel, by the landlord refusing to sell cider to the complaining witness and a companion, fearing that some one would "get full." Ezra Goodrich of Milton appears for the defendant and Ed. F. Carpenter for the state. Incidental, also, to this case there came up the matter of the people versus John Gagan whom the officers charged with being drunk and disorderly. The judge gave him ten

SOUSA'S DISCIPLINE.

General Schofield's Funny Break as to the Conduct of an Crchestra.

How Conductor Sousa was taken to task by General Schofield for his lack of discipline is told as follows.

The last echo of one of Sousa's overtures was just dying away over in front of the band and saluted the the salute and sent one of his men to escort the general up into the band-

"That music was beautiful-beautiful," exclaimed the general as he shook Sousa's hand warmly. "I am astonished, sir, that you get such results with so little discipline."

There is nothing that Sousa prides himself more on than being one of the strictest disciplinarians and he was naturally nettled at the general's

"Why, general, my men are under perfect control. I'm sure they are thoroughly drilled and I can hardly believe that there is any lack of discipline. I have never noticed it."

"No, that's just it; you don't see it," persisted the general. "I saw it, though. Do you know that as soon as you turn your back on one side of your band to shake your baton at the other those all quit playing. Of course you don't see it, for as soon as you turn around they begin again."

The fun in this, at the expense of ne general, lies of course in the fa that when a section of Sousa's men became silent as he turned to the other was when the music so required. But the general looked upon this lapse as he would look upon the suspension of a section of his artillery when he turned his attention to another part of the field.

BAD C. & N. W. WRECK AT PALATINE LAST NIGHT.

Stake on a Carload of Telephone Poles Broke and Let Thom Spread Out Like Teeth of a Rake-Operator Brockway Had His Leg Broken at His Desk.

Nobody reached Janesville until 10:30 last night if they relied on the accommodation or the vestibule. A bad wreck blocked the track at Palatine. It knocked a hole through the depot and seriously injured T. E. Brockway, a brother of James Brockway the St. Paul's Janesville night operator. Five freight cars were demolished and merchandise was scattered all over the track. The wreck was caused by a broken stake on a car of telegraph poles. Three of the poles swung out to one side like Brobdidgnagean lances. They were "in rest," for the ends were braced against the box car next behind.

A northwestern fast freight was 'tilting at the ring" and a passenger depot was the target.

With the train going fifteen miles the sand hills south of the fair an hour, the three gigantic spears grounds, when Gen. Schofield stepped struck the Palatine depot and went through the wooden walls as if distinguished leader. Sousa returned they were pasteboard. As the train swept by they twisted around. All the poles were knocked off the flat car, the big freight car was derailed and into the mass of telegraph poles and merchandise went four other cars. The wreck was complete and was very hard to clear up. Mr. Brockway, the only man who was injured, is the operator at that station. He was at work in his office when a telegraph pole was pushed | Delicious through the window and struck him full force. A broken leg was the most serious of his hurts and he was lucky to escape alive.

The I'welve Yellow Walstcoats.

The Chinese order of the Yellow Waistcoat appears to be the most exclusive order on the face of the earth. It is said that there have never been more than a round dozen of members in existence at the same time. Li Hung Chang, the lively septuagenarian who has been deprived of his insignia, was the doyen of the confraternity. Before him that distinction was enjoyed by the late Admiral Fong, who held it until some three years ago.
